U.S. equities markets increased 3.3% during the fourth quarter of 2016 fueled by optimism from the results of the presidential election. The rally was bolstered by expectations of cuts in individual and corporate tax rates, reduced regulatory requirements, higher inflation, and increased spending on infrastructure. After the election, the U.S. dollar also strengthened significantly against other major global currencies. The election accelerated the rise in bond yields due to expectations of higher inflation around the anticipated economic agenda of a new administration. This coupled with the Federal Reserve's decision to raise short-term interest rates by 25 basis points in December led to the 10-Year Treasury yielding 2.45% at the end of the year. Upcoming elections in Europe and the stronger U.S. dollar propelled economic reports coming from Europe and led to strong equity markets in Europe and Asia as well as higher interest rates.

Albert G. Lowenthal, Chairman and CEO commented, "We are disappointed with our performance during 2016 and are taking the steps necessary to improve our results in the future. We are increasing our efforts in areas that we believe will restore a growth in revenues which largely depend upon more effective recruiting of experienced personnel in our private client and investment banking divisions. In the quarter just ended, despite the post-election run-up in the equity markets, retail and institutional investor activity picked up for a short period immediately after the election but then remained somewhat muted during the remainder of the period reflecting a continued period of lower transaction activity from investors. The equities underwriting business was impacted by the low level of issuance as fewer companies accessed the capital markets. The Company was able to execute on large mandates in its debt capital markets and mergers and acquisition businesses which helped make up for the slower equities underwriting calendar. Client preference for fee-based relationships continued as reflected in higher assets under management which led to an increase in advisory fees during the fourth quarter of 2016. Fees earned from our cash sweep program were up substantially during the period due to the higher interest rate environment. If rates continue to move higher, as is widely expected, this should also bode well for other interest sensitive products that the Company offers. We are pleased to see our legal and regulatory costs decline for the period. We are hopeful that this trend will continue as we begin to see the benefits of the increased compliance and regulatory infrastructure that we have built, which includes increased and improved staffing, better processes, and new technology applications to oversee and control our business in light of the changing regulatory landscape."
